COURSE OBJECTIVES

Context

Many business decisions rely on the valuation of specific assets, of a business unit or of an overall entity. For instance, a CEO who is considering a strategic investment will worry about how investors will assess his/her decision, thus ultimately affecting firm value. A financial analyst considering the latest earnings release of a corporation will attempt to map these earnings into a valuation model to assess if the firm's shares are over- or under-priced. A board of directors that is considering the restructuring of a firm's operations or a new financing will consider how it is likely to affect its value. A venture capitalist or a private equity investor considering an investment in a firm will assess its value so that the attractiveness of the deal can be inferred. Before making a takeover offer on a competitor, a management team will value the competitor to assess if it is cheaper to buy it outright or, alternatively, to build new facilities to enter new markets. Finally, an entrepreneur considering a partial cession of his/her business in the context of estate or succession planning will need to obtain value estimates to assess the share of the business he/she is selling and the amount to be funded by the acquirer.

All these decisions will require directors, managers, bankers, investors and/or analysts to engage in a business valuation exercise. First, a firm's current strategic and financial situation will be inferred by analyzing its financial statements and other related information and putting it into context. Second, the firm's financial statements will be projected into the future to derive a value estimate. With such an estimate, an assessment can then be made if the decision will create value or not.

Learning Objectives

At the end of the course, students should be able to translate a firm's financial situation as well as its strategic objectives into financial projections that will serve as an input to a business valuation model. More specifically, students should be able to:

- Understand the basic principles of financial reporting under International Financial Reporting Standards;
- Assess a firm's underlying financial situation through an analysis of its financial statements:
- Determine a firm's strategic position and identify key success factors that need to be tracked;
- Prepare financial projections on the basis of financial and strategic diagnostics;
- Identify alternative valuation models and determine which one(s) is(are) most appropriate according to specific contexts;
- Integrate financial projections into a valuation model;
- Determine business value on the basis of the output from various valuation models and from different sets of business and operating conditions.

Since International Financial Reporting Standards are now mandatory in several countries around the world and by most publicly-traded Canadian firms starting in 2011, the analysis and cases emphasize this financial reporting model. However, other financial reporting models such as U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles may be covered or discussed. Consistent with the advent of IFRS and the global nature of investment, the course adopts an international perspective in terms of its selection of cases.

Teaching Method

The learning process relies on two complementary approaches: formal teaching by the instructor and class discussion of cases or problems. Short lectures will be relied upon to introduce key concepts, principles and/or methods, relying on current business and financial news and textbook-derived material. However, the core of class time will be used to illustrate key concepts, principles and methods through the analysis of cases. Students are thus expected to come to class prepared to engage in an active discussion about the assigned cases. Some special guest lecturers may be invited to talk about specific topics.

Students are responsible for all material contained in the syllabus, irrespective of the extent to which it is covered in class, unless advised to the contrary.

A case or a problem will be discussed every week and students are expected to be prepared to answer questions about the case. Participation in class discussion is to be evaluated both quantitatively and qualitatively. Only four case reports will need to be handed in and will be graded. These case reports can be done either individually or in teams of two (2) persons.

A term project is required. For the term project, students will be assumed to work for teams advising the various parties to the merger talks between FIAT and Chrysler LLC as of late 2013, early 2014. These parties, who are deemed to be the teams' clients, are respectively (1) FIAT's CEO, Mr. Sergio Marchionne, (2) Chrysler's board of directors and (3) Chrysler's minority shareholder, the union-led VEBA trust. The purpose of the term project is to perform a valuation of the 41.5% equity interest in Chrysler LLC held by the VEBA trust and to provide advice to the client.

EVALUATION

The final grade for the course will be allocated as follows:

Graded Assignments (12.5 % each X 4 assignments)	40%
Long Term Project	30%
Long Term Project Presentation	10%
Class Participation	20%
	100%

GRADING

The objective of this course is to broaden your knowledge and skills in the area of accounting. Working through the assignments will enable you to develop a better understanding of this field. Feedback will be provided to you throughout the course. Graduate level grades are based on performance not effort. There are no "A" students and "B" students, rather there is "A" work and "B" work.

Marks in the "A" range are reserved for exceptional work that exceeds course expectations. Achieving that level of scholarship is your responsibility.

Marks in the "B" range are allocated to work that fulfills course expectations. Marks in the "C" range are assigned to work that is complete but weak.

A+ EXCEPTIONAL in all respects	A to A- EXCELLENT contains original creative thought	well organized with few errors
very well organized and expressed	shows clear understanding of concepts sound critical evaluation	evidence of critical thought clear command of techniques and principles	ability to discriminate & interpret issues consistently exceeds expectations	analytic treatment of content
high level of synthesis	application of ideas
new understandings	synthesis—connections among disparate details
extension of course content	or ideas abstraction of content to real applications
B+ VERY GOOD	B to B- ADEQUATE to GOOD constitutes above-average graduate work	constitutes baseline for graduate work shows advanced comprehension of course	shows comprehension of course content content	coherent, understandable
meets criteria for assignment	contains key elements, basic facts/knowledge shows basic competence in synthesis	grammatically correct writing critical thinking	little extension, abstraction or integration of logically organized	concepts
C WEAK
minimally meets requirements, just passes

Important: Graduate students are allowed to receive no more than one C grade to remain in good standing in the University. Students who receive one (1) C grade will be considered on academic probation.

Letter and Number Grades

The following list provides the equivalent letter and number grades for assignments in this course:

Letter		Number
A+	90	-	100
A	85	-	89
A-	80	-	84
B+	77	-	79
В	73	-	76
B-	70	-	72
C	60	-	69
F	0	-	59

Note: These grades are simply guidelines. The professor reserves the right to assign respective grades in their class.
